Tax Implications for Domestic Partners and Children of Domestic Partners

The tax-favored status of employer provided health insurance (medical and dental coverage) is so well known that employers and employees often take it for granted. As such, the cost of coverage for a spouse and child(ren) / stepchild(ren) is automatically exempt from an employee's taxable income, but for a person who is not a spouse or child / stepchild through marriage, a payment for health care coverage is eligible for tax exemption only if the person is a "dependent" as defined in the Internal Revenue Code.

This criterion is separate from PLU's criterion for eligibility under the plan. A domestic partner and/or his or her dependent child(ren) are eligible for benefits under PLU's medical and dental plans as long as they meet the criterion outlined in Section B on the front side of this form. The criterion outlined below pertains to the ability of you as a PLU employee to receive those benefits and/or pay for those benefits on a tax-exempt basis.

IRS DEFINITION OF DEPENDENCY

Under the current definition in Section 152 of the Internal Revenue Code, your Domestic Partner may be considered to be a dependent if you meet several tests, including:

- 1) The Domestic Partner is a member of your household, and has his or her principal place of residence in your home, and
- 2) You furnish over half of the Domestic Partner's support for the year. To determine this, the amount you contribute must be compared with the amounts received for support by the Domestic Partner from all other sources, including any amounts supplied by him or her, including earnings.
- 3) If you elect to have the child(ren) of your Domestic Partner covered by these health benefits, the same rules of dependency apply. So, if the child(ren) does not receive over half of their support from you, the cost of their coverage may be taxable to you unless the child or child(ren) are your dependent(s).

If your Domestic Partner and his / her child(ren) are dependent(s) under this Code, you must sign the certification in Section E of this form to that effect to gain the benefit of the tax exemption. Although benefits can still be provided under PLU's plan, if your Domestic Partner and his / her child(ren) are not your dependent(s), the payments for coverage must be treated as follows:

- 1) Your premium contributions for health insurance for the Domestic Partner and his / her child(ren) will be made on an after-tax basis (instead of on a pre-tax basis).
- 2) PLU's contribution for the coverage for your Domestic Partner and his / her child(ren) (if any) will be considered taxable income to you, and PLU will report the cost of that coverage to you as taxable income and withhold the applicable state and federal taxes on those amounts.
