MUSIC EDUCATION AT PLU

Music Education at PLU is a rigorous program with opportunities for specialization in an area of interest. It is characterized by a strong performance component, relevant coursework, and time practicing teaching skills in area K-12 schools. Classes are small and are taught by full-time faculty. PLU's music education faculty members all have significant experience in K-12 schools. Because of their relationships with area music teachers, they are able to guide students to practicum and student teaching placements that are individually chosen to provide the best opportunity for a positive learning experience.

WHY PLU MUSIC EDUCATION?

- Small class sizes and two full-time faculty members dedicated to Music Education
- Engaging curriculum designed by faculty with years of teaching experience in all curricular areas
- Active Collegiate CWMEA Chapter
- All music education students take several specialized courses in area concentrations (band, choir, orchestra, or general music)
- Collaborate with practicing music educators in the south-sound region throughout the program
- Performance and teaching opportunities outside the academic setting
