

School of Arts & Communication: Revised Pass/Fail Policy (Spring 2020)

The School of Arts and Communication encourages students to wait on making decisions about withdrawals and using the P/F (Pass/Fail) option until students have had time to review revised syllabi and course expectations communicated by SOAC faculty after Spring Break. At that time, students will have more complete information about revised course expectations and deadlines.

If a student chooses the P/F option for a course within the School of Arts and Communication taken during Spring 2020 that is a prerequisite for another course within their program, the School of Arts and Communication will consider a grade of P as meeting the prerequisite.

Grades of C- or higher are counted toward the degree in all SOAC departments for Spring 2020. Students who choose the P/F option and then earn a D+ or lower, will receive an F on their transcript, and this is irreversible.

While COVID-19 has affected institutions around the world and we hope that most/all of them will be flexible regarding requirements completed during Spring 2020, we cannot guarantee this. Thus, if you are currently taking a course as a prerequisite for a graduate/professional program beyond PLU, please recognize that it is up to each individual graduate/professional program as to whether or not they will accept a P as evidence of satisfactory completion of the requirement. Please connect with your academic advisor and/or instructor if you have specific questions or concerns.
