

Bachelor of Arts in Social Work Professional Licensure Disclosures by State

As of July 1, 2020, all institutions of higher education, that receive federal financial aid, are required to disclose whether their degree programs qualify students to work in the state where the school/program is located. Furthermore, these degree programs are required to indicate whether its degree qualifies students to work in other states as well. To qualify as a social worker in many states, a license is required.

Information regarding whether obtaining a Bachelor of Arts in Social Work from Pacific Lutheran University qualifies students to become licensed in Washington state and other states and US territories is provided below. Links to each state's social work regulating body are also provided.

Please note that all states require background checks prior to being licensed. Many states require applicants to pass the Association of Social Work Boards (ASWB Bachelors level exam) in order to obtain a bachelorette level license. Please be advised that states may refer to their social work bachelorette license by different names. The ASWB's License Requirements for a Selected Jurisdiction may also be helpful in learning about the licensure requirements in various states and US territories.
