

You're snorkeling with sea lions in a turquoise bay of the Galápagos Islands. The agile animals swim right up to your mask and look in your eyes, taking your breath away. It's just one of the many experiences you'll have in this unforgettable study away opportunity. In the Amazon River basin, huge scarlet macaws streak through the rainforest canopy like living flames. You'll meet indigenous people in the Amazon who will explain their ways of knowing nature. You'll learn about conservation and sustainability. Students interested in photography will find world-class photographic opportunities. Optional extension to Machu Picchu in Peru.

Highlights:

- Snorkeling in the remote and beautiful Galapagos Islands
- Boating through the rainforest of the Upper Amazon basin
- Exploring the Andes Mountains and their people
- Photographing the superb wildlife, landscapes, and people of Ecuador
- Discovering the colonial city of Quito, Ecuador and, if you choose, the great mountain wonder of Machu Picchu, Peru

Environmental Literature in Ecuador and Peru:
