

ACADEMIC ACTIVITIES

The University Scholars Association is an educational gathering. It is a group of scholars who enjoy the company, the lively talk, and the wit of each other. We have weekly Wednesday Noon Programs with speakers from all parts of the University. There are several rooms where committees can meet with the comforts of home. Workshops often draw community leaders here, and informal discussions are the soul of the place.

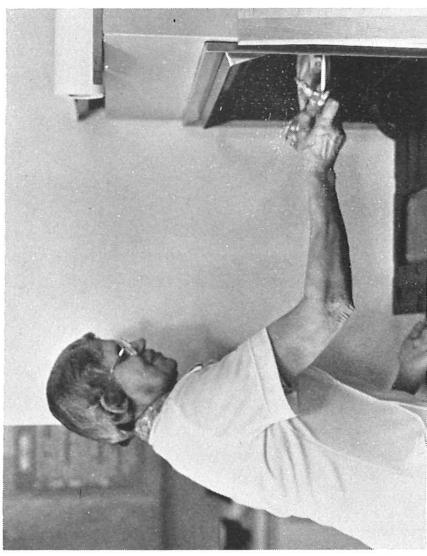

FOUNDING

In 1972 the University Scholars Association was established to enrich academic and social life among PLL's faculty, staff, and administration. Subsequently, Faculty House was purchased and activities were planned to encourage professional growth and personal enjoyment. Today approximately 200 members of the University Scholars Association find the diverse, yet integrative activities of the U.S.A. an appealing part of campus life.

NOON HOUR LUNCHES

Tasty and economical lunches are served each day, and a pot of coffee is always brewing. This is where you come if you like lively talk. For the introverts, we have two newspapers, several major magazines, and a quiet reading room. And for the desperate, we have the sports sections.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

Frequent social events such as banquets, social hours, and ethnic dinners cooked by the culinarily gifted among us give us a chance to eat, drink, and be merry. Spouses of members enjoy full membership privileges. What better way to meet people, and to keep friendships warm, than to meet in our own place?

READING/STUDY

The reading room is a sanctuary for those who desire a quiet and comfortable place to relax and study — and who need a break from the office.

RECREATION

Bridge, table tennis, and horseshoes provide breaks from the routine. The annual spring barbecue kisses the year goodbye. And the September open house reminds us that there are advantages to going back to work again.

CAMERADERIE

This is the place that helps break down the walls between disciplines. Here's where the latest campus issues are discussed, where we can go to grapple with timely topics, where we can get answers to questions beyond our ken.
